Distinguished Guest and Colleagues

It is my pleasure to welcome you at the “Tenth Annual Scientific Meeting on Hepatogastroenterology” of Theodor Bilharz Research Institute in collaboration with Beaujon Hospital, France.

We highly appreciate and cherish this excellent scientific cooperation with Beaujon Hospital and its role in helping scientific progress . Through the agreement between our institutions, we managed several scientific projects and training for young doctors in the prestigious departments of Beaujon Hospital.

We are sure that the program of our meeting will enrich the knowledge of hepatogastroenterologists regarding the care and management of patients. We are very lucky to have been able to bring together an eminent panel of international experts from France and Egypt who are dedicated to promoting all aspects of hepatogastroenterology.

It is my pleasure to welcome and thank our eminent guests from France and Egypt. Special thanks to Professor Philippe Ruszniewski, the French coordinator of the agreement, who has helped to maintain this fruitful cooperation from its beginning to the present time, also I want to thank Professor Ahmed El Ray the Egyptian coordinator of the agreement for his continuous effort to maintain the agreement and precious scientific meetings.

Our meeting has been granted 6 European CME credits (ECMEC) by the European Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (EACCME), denoting the quality of the program and the expertise of the speakers. The one-day meeting will comprise two sessions, and for the first time a video transmission of the workshop on EUS that has taken place at TBRI.

I invite you all to contribute to this meeting by sharing your professional experience, as only with your participation this meeting can reach its goal.

His main areas of interest is pancreatic tumors (solid and cyst), autoimmune pancreatitis, obstructive jaundice, submucosal tumors of the digestive tract and digestive endometriosis.

He has published 180 papers in international journals including NEJM, Lancet, Gastroenterology, Gut, Clinical Gastroenterology and Hepatology, GIE and Endoscopy and serves as reviewer for leading journals in gastroenterology. He is past president of the French Society of Gastroenterology and past president of the French Society of Endoscopy. He was editor of 4 books including Gastrointestinal Endoscopy in practice and 40 book chapters. He gave 350 invited lectures in all over the world during the last 30 years.

Professor Valerie PARADIS

Professor in Pathology, is the chairman of Pathology department (Beaujon hospital) and leader of the INSERM team "From inflammation to cancer in digestive diseases" (INSERM 1149 Paris). Fields of interest and research include pathological and molecular aspects of liver fibrosis and tumors (benign and malignant) with a specific interest of hepatocellular carcinomas developed in patients with metabolic syndrome. Her team has developed original in situ proteomic approach (MALDI imaging) for identification of tissue biomarkers, and ex vivo culture model of human tumor slices for evaluation of therapeutic molecules.

V. Paradis is involved in educational activities, chairing the specialty "Epithelium: interface structure" (Master 2 "Cellular biology-Physiology-Pathology"). She is co-coordinator of the DHU UNITY "Unmet Needs for Innovation in HepaTology and Gastroenterology" (Coordinator Pr DC Valla) and task leader (WP2: cross sectional clinical study)) of the RHU QUID-NASH (coordinator Pr DC Valla) aiming to identify novative noninvasive diagnostic markers of NASH in diabetic patients.

Professor Imam WAKED

Professor of Medicine and Hepatology, (MD, FRCP, FAASLD) Dean Emeritus of the National Liver Institute (NLI) in Egypt. Dr. Waked graduated Cairo University School of Medicine, obtained a Doctorate degree from Ain Shams University, and trained in the liver unit of the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.
